

Tracy's personal connection to Skye Burn's grandparents, June & Farrar Burn

June and Farrar Burn Papers
Center for Pacific Northwest Studies
Western Libraries Heritage Resources
Western Washington University

Burn (June and Farrar) papers #15-10-05
Center for Pacific Northwest Studies
Western Libraries Heritage Resources
Western Washington University

Skye writes:

In the 1970s, when she was Fairhaven College student, Tracy lived in a log cabin that Farrar built. She wrote songs in the space where Farrar played the guitar and sang. She perched on the window seat where June read. She slept beneath the swooping roof and listened to the rain and sighing trees. She and other Fairhaven students read Living High, and their ideas were shaped by June and Farrar's philosophy.

Years ago, Tracy raised the funds and organized a work party to preserve the log cabin that Farrar built on 2.5 acres which are now part of the campus of Fairhaven College of Interdisciplinary Studies/WWU.